Frances Waterton

According to his will Robert Waterton had a sister called Frances whose married name was Earlismán. The 1686 Visitations of Hampshire state under the Erlesman pedigree that Richard Erlesman married "Frances daughter of Francis Waterton of Newport".

Robert's brother Edward (see apprenticeship below) died 1625 and he had married Mary Anderson at Calbourne 13/5/1608.

Victoria County History of Somerset

Robert received the Manor of Crosse in Durston, Somerset through his marriage to Jayne Moleyns from her father or grandfather Henry (see Moleyns). Robert passed it to grandson Robert Blachford in 1647.

Note - Henry Sherfield was Recorder of the City and a 'puriton, lawyer and agricultural innovator'. He was MP for Salisbury in 1623&8 and broke the stained glass windows of St Edmunds Church in 1633. He died 1634. Sherfield had a house at New Sarum in Tanners Street (now St Anne's Street).

Petition of 1628 from the Oglander Collection

16th September - from Newport, the protest of the Gentlemen of the Island against the billeting of soldiers in the Isle of Wight - signed Sir John Oglander, William Meux, Sir Edward Denys, William Lisley, Robert Dillington, Robert Waterton, Mayor of Newport.

Note - these soldiers were billeted on the island after the hostilities with France and a Scots regiment of about 1500 men bound for the continent was diverted to the Island. These soldiers caused much nuisance and distress to the people of the island as is recorded in the memoirs of Sir John Oglander.

English Civil War

Sir John Oglander was an ardent Royalist in the Civil War and noted the way that Parliamentarians of 'lesser' stock had pushed aside the previous loyal gentlemen of the island (Isle of Wight). One can assume that Robert Waterton was in this list of loyalists and very probably was also a royalist given the Catholic background of the Waterton family of Walton. King Charles I was imprisoned on the island between 1647 and 1648 and he did receive visits from local gentry and sympathisers and one can speculate that Robert was amongst them if he was of good enough health to make the visit as he died in July 1648.

Robert Waterton refers to John Oglander, gent, as his 'loving friend' in his will of 1648 above. This John must have been a child or grandson of Sir John Oglander of Wight.

A royalist's notebook;: The commonplace book of Sir John Oglander, Kt., of Nunwell, born 1585, died 1655

5/11/1625

£25 loan - eleven men listed

£10 loan - six men listed including 'Mr Robert Walterton (sic) of Newport'.

Proceedings of the Star Chamber of King James I - Bill of Complaint

Robert Waterton of Newport (IOW) is referred to in proceedings of the Star Chamber of King James I 1603 - 1625. The case in front of the chamber appears to refer to a seizure of property (shoppe) and an unlawful assembly and violent assault by people armed in a warlike manner with daggers, swords, bills, long pikes, staves, hammers and pitchforks. It appears that Robert Waterton is the person assaulted and that he was beaten and suffered blows to the body. It appears that those commanding the group who led the assault were John Jolliffe (Jolly) *, widow Douzabell Jolliffe, William Jolly, widow Elizabeth Waterton (sister of Douzabell *), Edward Waterton, Frances Waterton, Robert Dyke, Richard Browne and John Vanner. Elizabeth was the second wife of Robert's father, Francis, and Edward and Frances his half brother and sister.

It therefore shows an unsavoury family dispute took place at this time. Edward Waterton refers to his brother Robert in his 1625 will and indicates there must have been a their relationship was repaired because Robert leaves his sister Frances some money in his 1648 will.

* John Jolyffe married Douzabell Newman in 1571 in Newport, Isle of Wight.

1612 Sandhill, Fordingbridge

Robert and Jayne held the Manor of Sandhill in Hampshire in 1612, see also Moleyns and Blachford family for the history of this manor near Fordingbridge.

Robert and Jayne had two daughters. Eleanor married Robert Blachford and the other married a Thomas Urrey and who had a daughter Katherine. The Blachfords and Katherine Urrey sold the lands at Sandhall to Thomas Warre in 1702.

1686 Visitations of Hampshire

Children of Robert Waterton and Jane Molyns - Thomas ('obt sine prole?') and Eleanor

Robert descended from the Watertons of Walton Hall in Yorkshire. This is confirmed by the presence on the Blachford coat of arms of the arms of Assenhull and De Burg both of whom married into that family.

* Francis Waterton and the Watertons of Walton

How do we know that the Francis Waterton of Newport was the son of Sir Thomas and Jane Waterton? Particularly as a Francis Waterton is mentioned as a son in the will of John Waterton of nearby Southampton in 1565. We don't yet have complete and irrefutable proof but there are very good reasons for believing that this is most probable -

1) The dates fit perfectly for the son of Sir Thomas/Jane. They married in 1532 and Francis was 4th child so born after 1536. He married 1564. These dates fit well for him to have been the Francis who was executor to sister Rosamund's will in 1559, aged about 23.

2) Name connections - Francis of Newport had a son called Robert and his grandfather would have been Sir Robert Waterton. Francis also had a son John and Sir John Waterton would have been his great grandfather.

3) From the Blachford coat of arms we know that Eleanor Waterton came from the De Burgh / Assenhull line and that is the same one as Sir Thomas. Between Assenhull and de Burgh and Sir Thomas Waterton there is only one possible male line * that the name could have passed down and so for Eleanor to claim the pedigree it must logically have come through Sir Thomas.

4) There was only one Francis Waterton on the Walton family pedigree that I have seen recorded, the son of Sir Thomas Waterton.

5) IGI and other resources do not present any other alternative marriage of the Francis son of Sir Thomas and he did not die in infancy. The only Yorkshire 16th century references to Francis Waterton would appear to be of Francis of Newport Isle of Wight unless the 1572/1596 fines and 1559 executor of Rosamunds will was a different Francis which is highly unlikely on balance of probability given his link to Yorkshire property in the Wakefield area at the same time period.

6) Francis was the 4th son and child of the marriage of Sir Thomas and Jane. He was not therefore the sole heir and so would not have inherited through primogeniture so one could quite expect him to become a gentleman merchant elsewhere. Sir Thomas had a large family.

7) I do not believe that there were any other Watertons on the Isle of Wight before Francis and he had to have come from somewhere else. Isle of Wight family researcher Ian Broad has confirmed this and says that the baptism of Robert Waterton in 1565 was the first Waterton baptism on the island.

8) Francis had a daughter Elizabeth. If he was the son of Sir Thomas he also had a sister called Elizabeth. However this could also be explained if this was a child of his second wife - Elizabeth.

9) Francis married a Krystyan Markes and there is a possibility that the Markes also come from Yorkshire (evidence of Markes / Kaye marriages in the 16th century at Woodsome), although this has yet to be confirmed.

10) Francis' daughter Frances had children called Thomas and Jane possibly in recognition of her grandparents. Francis' son Robert also had a son called Thomas.

11) There is a direct link in the property bond above between Francis of Newport IOW and the same Wakefield (near Walton) area of Yorkshire where Sir Thomas lived.

12) There is evidence that Francis had links to Yorkshire however there is no evidence that the Southampton Waterton family of the 16th century had such direct links to the home county of the Walton branch of the Waterton family.

13) Whilst there is a proven link between the Watertons of Newport and Yorkshire there is none between Southampton and Newport other than the will of a John Waterton of 1603 who was an apprentice in Southampton and refers to siblings Edward and Frances Waterton and to Newport IOW. However John was of the Newport family and there is no evidence that he had any connections with the Southampton family and was not an indentured apprentice to that family either.

14) John Waterton of Southampton was a burgess (freeman) of Southampton. Francis and his son Robert referred to themselves as gentlemen and the latter became Mayor of Newport. I believe that the Watertons of Newport were of a higher social status to those of Southampton as would be expected if Francis was indeed the son of a Knight. The eldest son of a Knight, which for Sir Thomas Waterton was Richard or Thomas, was called an Esquire. It would not be unusual for younger sons of a Knight to be described as a gentleman.

15) John Waterton of Southampton had a wife Anis or Alice and there is no use of that name by either Francis of Newport or his children.

16) Whilst arguably the Watertons of Isle of Wight could have invented the link to the Watertons of Walton, in addition to the confirmation of being granted their coat of arms in the 1633 Visitations by the Royal Heralds, the probability that a family based so far distant from Yorkshire and in the 16th/17th century would have been able to persuade as to the connection to Yorkkshire to make such a family ancestral claim which is then supported by the royal heralds is not probable.

IMPORTANT note - the 1563 Visitations of the County of Yorkshire records says that -

".. some of the important houses in Yorkshire disregarded the heralds summons. It is singular that ... Waterton of Walton ... do not appear in these pages."

This is a shame as if they participated had it may have helped confirm Francis Waterton of Newport's connection to the line above.
